RETURNING AND NEW OPPORTUNITES

There has been much said over the past several months at University Heights about evangelism. This is a good thing. Brother Matt is continuing that theme in his auditorium class and I am confident it will continue to be helpful as we consider how to speak to others effectively. Of course, the most effective method of evangelism will always be the one the Christian is actually willing to try and stick with. With these things in mind, I want to make you aware of upcoming opportunities.

Those who were members at UHeights before the pandemic may recall that we had two community studies occurring on a weekly basis. Tuesday morning's a few of us met at Panera Bread on Richmond Road at 8 AM and on Saturday's another group met at the Fayette Mall food court at 10. Both of these opportunities will be returning, Lord willing, in January. Those of you who joined either may recall that we had regular visitors at both, and one gentleman visited the church as a result. I will give you more details as January nears. Please think about folks you could invite and let them know.

I will be teaching the college class starting in mid-January on the letter of James. At the beginning of that class, I will be asking the college students to consider their schedules to see if we could start a morning study at the Starbucks in the W.T. Young Library. We'll go with whatever morning works best and may add another morning as well. College students, please begin thinking about that now and consider friends and fellow students to invite. We'll hammer out the details when the college class begins.

The Daniels' currently host a bi-weekly study on discipleship. I recall one visitor from the community attending and there may have been others. This format is often more comfortable at first for people who do not have much of a "religious" background and gives them an opportunity to meet Christians in a less intimidating environment than a church building. If you'd like to begin a study geared toward folks in your community but aren't comfortable teaching it, there are those here who would be glad to assist.

Remember that our job is to plant the seed. The growth is God's end of things. These are opportunities to bring people to places where the seed is being planted. Are you able and willing to attend a study? Great! Are you willing to invite folks to read the Bible (and that's really all it has to be) with you or someone you trust? Even better!
