WHAT HAPPENED TO REPENTANCE?

“Jesus loved and ate with sinners.” “He gets us.” These statements are favorites among many these days. The second statement has a number of extremely polished and impressive television commercials based upon it. Both statements are true. Jesus does love sinners and he did eat with them. (John 3:16; Mark 10:21; Matthew 9:9-13) Jesus does “get us” in that he knows what it means to be human. He knows what it means to hurt, grieve, and experience deep emotion. (Mark 3:5; 14:32-34; John 11:35)

However, modern people tend to stop far short of a complete biblical picture in this. When folks make the first statement today, they often leave the impression that Jesus was carousing with sinners, affirming their lifestyle and choices. Those who make the second statement tend to leave the impression that Jesus is just an encouraging shoulder to lean on, wiping away tears while telling everyone, “Hang in there, you got this”, regardless of the life they are living and the choices they are making.

I believe this is the product of a terrible error many make today: the downplaying or complete removal of repentance from the gospel message. Modern people do not like to think about repentance. It’s an uncomfortable word that stubbornly stares us in the face and requires that we admit we’re sinners. It reminds us that “our truth” is meaningless and we will all have to stand before God to be judged. Few messages are as repugnant to modern sensibilities as the one that says we’ve ruined our relationship with God, we are responsible for our own spiritual downfall, we can’t make it right on our own, but it had better be put right or we are lost forever. As a result, the gospel becomes so watered down as to cause one to wonder why Jesus had to die at all?

A basic reading of Scripture is enough to show anyone willing to admit it that repentance is a vital part of the gospel message. Mark gives us the tenor of Jesus' entire ministry in the first words he records from our Lord. "Now after John was arrested, Jesus came into Galilee, proclaiming the gospel of God, and saying, 'the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent and believe in the gospel.'" (1:14-15)

Jesus said, "No, I tell you; but unless you repent, you will all likewise perish." (Luke 13:3, 5) If a sinner is made comfortable in their sin, if they are made to think that they are mostly fine just the way they are, whatever message has is leaving that impression is not the gospel as recorded in scripture. The one living in open sin and rebellion against God is not mostly fine. Jesus loved sinners enough to tell them they were sinners and needed repentance. If someone says that makes modern people uncomfortable, how comfortable do you suppose Jesus was nailed to a cross? He died to save people from their sins, not to accommodate their living in them. Simply put, without the message of repentance there is no gospel. Adam Litmer
